2 Project Objectives

The Council is required to adopt the Model Concerns and Complaints Policy and support its implementation with specific adaptations to the way the Council perceives and responds to complaints.

The project is intended to facilitate the introduction of the Model Concerns and Complaints Policy and ensure that it becomes embedded within the Council's culture. The emphasis of the New Policy is on learning from complaints and on putting things right when they have gone wrong.

Complaints currently cost the Council money, but there are other cost implications too. For example, complaints cost in staff time, can lead to detrimental reputation issues and lowered staff morale.

However, it is acknowledged that managing complaints effectively provides opportunities to improve customer care and citizen-centric services that enhance our reputation as a Council that serves, cares and does things consistently well. Put simply, complaints resolved effectively results in high quality, effective services.

In order to achieve this, the Council will have to embrace the corporate ownership of complaints management as something essential to our services, by introducing processes that shift focus towards the needs of the public and prompt and effective resolution of their concerns. The Council will have to support the introduction of new systems and procedures to ensure that it learns from instances where things were not done well, and provides evidence of instances where things went well.

The adoption of the new policy will require a change in culture and a shift towards more responsive services which are seen to serve. This will be achieved through ensuring the buy-in of all staff from senior managers to frontline staff. Training is key, in order that complaints are recognised, where possible resolved at source and effectively managed.

One of the project's main objectives is to ensure that the customer receives a consistently high level of effective and businesslike service from all the Council's services. When issues arise, the Council can take an objective, evidence based look at matters, resolve concerns and learn.

The project has been identified as a key element of community engagement and it interfaces with other key institutional issues which underpin the recovery process.

[Insert Project Name]

3 Project Scope

To establish a Project Board responsible for ensuring the corporate ownership of complaints management. The Project Board will include Members and Senior Officers.

It is intended to establish a Working Group comprising staff experienced in the process of complaints. The Working Group will consider operational issues and will report to the Project Board. The Working Group will look at the following areas:

- How the Council can most effectively adopt the New Policy – identifying front line staff, identifying possible Investigators and arranging appropriate training.
- Identify ICT and other requirements needed to implement the system.
- Arrange customer feedback sessions.
- Consider Customer Care issues – to ensure that there is a positive attitude towards complaints management and putting people first.
- A corporate system for gathering intelligence so that the Council can learn from complaints and identify trends and specific issues.
- Introducing procedures to facilitate the formalised exchange of information with Members in order to assist them in their constituency role, this is known as 'Signposting'.

4 Outline Business Case

Complaints Management is part of the Recovery Plan and the New Policy will now replace any previous actions. The adoption of the new complaints management system will facilitate improved services and support other initiatives to improve community engagement.

Project Benefits

It is anticipated that the successful implementation of the new procedure will result in fewer complaints being referred to the Ombudsman. This would enhance the Council's reputation and free up the time of officers who have to assist the Council to respond to the Ombudsman's investigation.

It is important that systems for monitoring customer satisfaction will be introduced, which will enable the Council's performance to be monitored and reported upon. Customer satisfaction is an important element in the procedure.

Project Costs

[Is there an allocated budget? What are the indicative costs associated with project at this stage?]

The project is a corporate project and that any costs arising from its implementation should be considered as corporate costs.

It is recognised that there are likely to be costs implications to ensuring that the new procedure is embedded within the Council's culture and ensuring that the Council is able to capitalise on opportunities for service development. This means that a considerable training element is required in order to maximise customer care and early complaints resolution.

The table below attempts to demonstrate costs which are likely to be associated with the project.

Staffing
The PSOW procedure requires that the Council increases its capacity for complaints handling.	Investigator posts  (2 full time posts)	2 x £25-£30k (plus on-costs)
It is anticipated that Investigators and Admin / Coordinators are required. Capacity could be shared on a North Wales Basis.	Admin/Coordinator (1 full time post)	1 x £15-£18k (plus on-costs)
Training
Implementation of the new procedure requires a substantial training element.	Investigations training	2x £600
In addition to the need to train Investigators and complaints officers, there is a need for customer care / complaints training to be extended through the Council.	Complaints management training for complaints officers and managers	£2000 - £4500
	Customer care /complaint training for all frontline staff.	£600 per ½ day per 15 people. Possibly required by 200 staff

ICT
The PSOW procedure requires that the Council has in place an adequate system to facilitate monitoring of the complete complaints process. An investment in ICT capacity is essential in order to ensure that this is done efficiently and that service development as a result of learning outcomes can be identified.	A new complaints management system is required. This will require elements of case management but also workflow. The system may require a Customer Relationship Management element (CRM).	Costs vary from £20k to £100k, depending on functionalities required.

2 Project Objectives

The Council must adopt the Ombudsman's Model Concerns and Complaints Policy for Public Service Providers. Each Public Service Provider can tailor their Policy according to the size and operational requirements of the organisation but this should not impact on people's experience of complaints handling – "elements such as the form, the timescales and the number of stages should be consistent for all".

A Project Mandate was developed in accordance with the Council's Project Management System and was accepted by the Heads of Service in November 2011. It became apparent during work on the Project Initiation Document (PID) that the scope of the project would be determined by the resources and buy-in allocated to it.

A bid for funding was submitted on 8 December 2012 and as development of the PID was dependent upon knowing what funding the Council could allocate it was considered prudent to await the Council's decision. However, work had commenced on designing two Project Plans arranged by the probable levels of funding obtained; the first being based on receiving the entire amount requested, whilst the second was scaled down to reflect 75% of funding. The PID and the associated Project Plan did not anticipate receiving zero funding.

The project plan was revisited on 27 March 2012. A revised Project issues sheet is provided as an attachment.

3 Project Scope

Review of Project Scope – March 2012

The Council is required to adopt the PSOW Policy and to embed the necessary changes to its business culture in order to underpin the new procedure.

However, the adoption and management of the Policy within existing resources will have considerable implications for the Council's services. The Mandate agreed by the Heads of Service presented a much more centralised system based around a strengthened central monitoring team.

It is recognised that the adoption of the new Policy will place a greater share of the burden for administering and monitoring the complaints procedure upon services. In fact, work has commenced to produce a new Project Mandate which, recognising the distinctions between the Project Plans, will clearly set out how the services will play an increased role in the process. The revised PID will be presented to the Heads of Service in June 2012. Nonetheless, it is unlikely that this will introduce any delay to the development of the Project Plan.

It is apparent that many elements of the initial Project Plan will have to be abandoned as unrealistic in view of present realities. Not least, the work intended to change the Council's culture and drive effective citizen focused services through improved customer care.

It is necessary to design a project plan with a more limited scope. It is evident that elements within the Policy are not viable with existing resources. These elements are shown below.

[Insert Project Name]

2.1 Lessons Learnt

A major part of the new policy is monitoring trends in order to learn from our mistakes, and improve customer care.

What we had planned to do

To procure a specific electronic system which will produce an unique identifier for each contact with the public, which could be accessed by identified front line staff and the centre and which could produce reports and provide easy intelligence.

What we now intend to do

It is recognised that without an electronic system with sufficient sophistication that the Council will struggle to prepare evidence of its contact with its customers; have difficulty in determining trends and learning from its mistakes. It is likely that monitoring the Council's performance will be difficult and that no improvements over the existing procedure can be made.

Meetings have been held with IT to see if they can develop an in-house solution.

2.2 Informal Resolution

Informal Resolution forms the first stage of the new policy. It is intended that a greater proportion of concerns are dealt with at the point of contact with frontline staff and that this contact is recorded as evidence.

What we had planned to do

The new Procedure was intended to reduce the number of complaints being progressed to Stage 2 by empowering frontline staff to take ownership of the new complaints management ethos and resolving our customer's concerns where possible at the first point of contact.

To do this successfully, frontline staff need to be adequately trained in customer care and complaints resolution. This training would complement work on developing customer care and citizens engagement. Training would be a necessary but resource intensive investment.

What we now intend to do

We will train the Council's existing Complaints Officers on the New Procedure.

We will meet with all Complaints Officers and develop a list of the types of issues which Services could deal with at Stage 1. It is anticipated that this will provide terms of reference for operating the new Complaints system.

To discuss with HR section what training can be undertaken with no extra funding. (ref: 3.9 of the New Policy – staff to be empowered and trained to recognise seriousness of complaints and deal with them appropriately etc)

2.3 Investigators

The policy states "investigate once, investigate well" but stage 2 should be flexible in order to respond appropriately to each complaint. There should be a "grading" system based on the seriousness of complaints – this will inform the investigation of each complaint. It is vitally important that our customers feel that their concerns and complaints are taken seriously and that the quality and impartiality of our investigations is recognised.

What we had planned to do

It was intended to employ additional staff as investigators and administrative support. This would extend a sufficient degree of autonomy from services and would facilitate improved contact and engagement with complainants. Improved staffing levels would reduce pressure on the central team and facilitate greater compliance with the timescales.

What we now intend to do

To identify and train investigators from within Council services who could be called to investigate the most serious complaints. We are also exploring the potential for collaboration with neighbouring Councils.

HPP and BJ are due to attend a 2 day "investigators training" course arranged by the North Wales Complaints Officers Group (week commencing 23 April 2012).

It is proposed to roll out the training to investigators in due course.

4 Outline Business Case

Complaints Management is part of the Recovery Plan and the New Policy will now replace any previous actions etc. Despite the fact that the New Policy is not mandatory, it is an ideal opportunity for the Council to move forward with complaints management and adopt, as far as it practicable, a system that has been put together by experts in the field.

Corporate Theme	How project contributes
Enhance the reputation of the council and island	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• The way the public view the Council needs to be improved and the successful implementation of the project will improve public perception of the Council.</li></ul>

[Insert Project Name]

Business like and affordable services	The management of complaints is costly – staff time and staff morale and reputation issues . The new system of complaints management will ensure that complaints are resolved cost effectively, investigated well and reassure staff and public alike.

Project Benefits

- Fewer complaints being referred to the Ombudsman – the work needed to respond to cases investigated by the Ombudsman take up hours of staff time that would be better spent doing the “day job”. This would also enhance the Council’s reputation.
- Improved Customer satisfaction – this would be measured and reported upon.

Project Costs

A bid for funding was refused in March 2012. However it is imperative that the Council allocates its existing resources to implement the necessary changes. Alternative funding is being investigated.
